

CIVIL DEFENSE AND EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT ORGANIZATIONAL HISTORY: United States. 1917-2001.

Dam Safety Coordination (EOP) 1977-79
 Earthquake Hazard Reduction (EOP) 1978-79
 Consequence Management in Terrorism (EOP)
 Warning and Emergency Broadcast (EOP) 1977-79

Federal Insurance Administration (HUD) 1968-79
 National Fire Prevention and Control Administration (DOC) 1974-1979
 National Weather Service Community Preparedness Program (DOC) 1973-1979

Note: F indicates a transfer of function from one agency to another, R indicates the renaming of an organization, M indicates the merger of organizations, T indicates a transfer of offices between departments. WH indicates White House, DOD indicates Department of Defense, EOP indicates Executive Office of the President, GSA indicates General Services Administration, HUD indicates Department of Housing and Urban Development, ARMY indicates Department of the Army, DOC indicates Department of Commerce.

The diagram above traces the organizational history of civil defense and emergency management in the Federal government of the United States. As the chart suggests this history is both complex and convoluted. It is important to note that at any specific point in time a given function might be being performed by one agency, by two or more agencies, or not be being performed at all, depending on how civil defense and emergency management were defined in doctrine, policy, and common practice.

Dowling, John and Evans M. Harrell, editors, Civil Defense: A Choice of Disasters, New York, NY, American Institute of Physics, 1987. Mitchell, Donald W., Civil Defense: Planning for Survival and Recovery, Washington, DC, Industrial College of the Armed Forces, 1966. "Records of the Office of Emergency Preparedness," available at <http://www.nara.gov/guide/rg396.html>, accessed 6 October 2001. Drabek, Thomas E., "The Evolution of Emergency Management," in Thomas E. Drabek and Gerard J. Hoetmer, editors, Emergency Management: Principles and Practice for Local Government, Washington, DC, International City Management Association, 1991, pp. 3-29.